

AMY ROSE

Member of the Cote First Nation in Saskatchewan, Amy Rose is dedicated to building relationships with Aboriginal peoples and has been identifying, developing and promoting capacity enhancement opportunities in different sectors for over 10 years.

Amy attended Vancouver Island University with an academic focus in First Nations History and Political Science. She was a participant in the inaugural Indigenous Works - Opportunity Fair, "Inclusion Works", which catapulted her career in advocating for the advancement of workplace inclusion. Amy currently works at Canfor and leads non-operational First Nations engagement with the goal of increasing First Nations representation within its workforce.
